Unsinkable Ships

Unsinkable ships, constructed from designs by Captain R. B. Forbes, of Boston, will, according to him, in a f-w years carry all the first-class goods and first-class passengers-for which, we suppose, first-class rates will be charged-between Europe and the United States. He proposes these vessels to be built of steel and to be divided into at least ten compartments, exclusive of those occupied by machinery and fuel; every compartment to have the means of pumping in air and pumping out water. Such a shir, he thinks, could not very well sink, but if, as an additional security, all the freight was secured in water tight packages, the vessel would fleat even if every one of the compartments had a fracture. It is more than probable that all heavy and coarse merchandise, such as metals, will be excluded from the fast mail and pasenger steamers. Captain Forbes states that it will only be necessary to see that the compartments of the two lower decks are without defect, and to introduce a complete system of pumps for air and water, and to adopt the old Chinese method of packing silks and teas, using either casks or metallic coverings so far as practicable. The hazards of an ocean voyage, be says, will be reduced to a minimum; but no safety can be guaranteed where steamers run ashore, as too often happens .- Iron.

It is surprising how rapidly and effectively St. Jacobs Oil finishes rhenmatism.
